

Plane Crash Scenario

There's been a small private plane crash in the Bahamas. 6 survivors were on board but have now been airlifted to a local hospital for treatment. In the meanwhile, investigators must thoroughly review all possible causes of the crash. They are required to conduct an extensive examination of all 6 survivors' belongings. In order to figure out whose belongings they are looking at, investigators must piece together the clues that will help them come to a reasonable decision or inference about whom the belongings should be returned to. You are now an investigator responsible for reviewing the items you have been provided. Each item was found in the same area or piece of luggage, so it's reasonable to infer that all of the items in your specific bag were from the same survivor. Due to the nature of the crash, survivors are unable to review the items in person until later, so it's up to you to solve the puzzle.
